Neighbors' night out

By Steve Marschke

About 15 West Sacramento neighborhoods got together yesterday evening for local participation in the national "Night Out Against Crime" program, throwing block parties and getting to know their neighbors.

The annual event is co-sponsored by police across the nation, and was celebrated here on Tuesday. Residents were asked to leave their front porch lights on in a symbol of solidarity, and to go out to the street and get to know each other.

Many block parties offered refreshments. Celebrities such as McGruff the Crime Dog, local politicians and city council members, and other notables made the rounds of the neighborhoods.

The goal was to get people to know each other, with the idea that neighbors who know each other are more likely to be able to look out for each others' homes and to notice and report any suspicious visitors.

The program works in tandem with the Neighborhood Watch program, also in conjunction with the West Sacramento Police Department.

On Fernwood St., a group of old friends began gathering early in the evening, with refreshments on card tables nearby.

When asked why her neighbors organized the block party, neighborhood watch"captain" Leona Kreun replied that the police department "wanted us to get together, to get to know each other."

Bob Jack was more concise. "Bandits," he laughed.

Anyone wanting more information on the National Night Out or on Neighborhood Watch may call Lisa Cox, West Sacramento Community Services Officer, at 372-2461.

Richmond police kill man suspected of robbing West Sacramento KFC

By Steve Marschke

A man shot to death by police after a robbery at a Richmond KFC (Kentucky Fried Chicken) restaurant is believed be the same man responsible for robbing a West Sacramento KFC at gunpoint in June.

"A couple of weeks ago I heard that a KFC in Richmond had been robbed, and police there arrested one suspect and shot and killed another suspect," said Detective Tom Bowler of the West Sacramento Police Department. That incident occurred July 9 in the Bay Area town.

The dead man, 34-year old Antonio Aaron of Richmond, is believed to have believed to have been the same man who climbed through a drive-through window at the KFC in West Sacramento on Westacre Road, armed with a handgun, and herded all the employees together before escaping in a car with cash from the store, Bowler added. That robbery took place June 9 at about 10:45 p.m., when the restaurant offered drive-through service only.

Police believe Aaron hooked up with fellow suspect Donnie Keith Bailey, 27 years old (and a fellow Richmond resident) for a string of robberies along the I-80 corridor between Sacramento and the Bay Area. Bowler believes Aaron acted alone during the West Sacramento KFC robbery.

"The way the robberies were being committed was similar, as was the suspects' description," said Bowler. "At least some of the time, they were using stolen cars. Their targets were mostly fast food restaurants along the I-80 corridor."

Bowler has interviewed Bailey as part of his investigation.

City agrees to pay $400,000 to end lawsuit on shooting

■ Suspect injured, never charged, in incident that followed police pursuit of an alleged armed robber

By Steve Marschke

City officials confirmed Tuesday that West Sacramento has agreed to settle a lawsuit over a 1992 police shooting by paying $400,000 to the man injured in that incident.

Early in the morning of January 8, 1992, West Sacramento police were told by the manager of a Best 4 Less Motel on West Capitol Avenue that a man had robbed the motel at gunpoint, left the premises, and then returned to one of the motel's rooms.

Three officers, led by Sgt. Russ Thomas (now a lieutenant for the W.S.P.D.) entered the room with guns drawn.

A police spokesman said in 1992 that Bruce Anthony Stark (then 42 years old) turned towards officers with an object in one hand. Thomas fired his weapon, hitting Stark in the abdomen. The injury hospitalized Stark, causing the loss of one kidney and of bowel control, according to the Sacramento Bee.

The Bee report, citing testimony in the resulting lawsuit, also said that the object in Stark's hand had been a piece of a car antenna which Stark had been using as a "crack" pipe, and that Thomas testified that the metallic object appeared to be a gun and that Thomas felt Stark turning with the intent to shoot.

Although Stark was identified as the robber by the motel manager, no gun or other evidence of the robbery was found at the scene and Stark was arrested but later released without being charged for the robbery.

Thomas said yesterday that terms of the settlement prohibited him from commenting on the case.

Carol Richardson, Assistant City Manager of West Sacramento, confirmed the settlement and said that the money would be paid out of an "self-insurance" fund called the Yolo County Public Agency Risk Management Insurance Authority (YCPARMIA), set up by West Sacramento and the other cities in Yolo County, as well as the county itself, the Esparto School District, and other agencies in the area.

A variable, annual premium of about $500,000 covers West Sacramento for general liability judgments of up to $500,000, and West Sacramento belongs to another association which insures it for liability payments of up to $9,500,000. The city pays a $5,000 deductible on claims.

The city covers workers compensation, pollution liabilities and some other insurance costs through YCPARMIA as well.

Chinese influence in scenes of California

From Betty Fairbairn Sokolich
Exhibition Chairperson
East Yolo
Friends of the Library

The current exhibit at the Arthur Turner Library, West Sacramento is the work of Sacramento artist Dorothy Stead. The paintings created by Stead are excellent examples of her best-known paintings of scenes and flowers from her native California. From an early age, the artist was inspired by an aunt to become an artist. She has studied art from an early age and continued to study after college with professionally-known artists throughout California as well as painting on location in Mexico and France.

Stead has a great interested in a number of different styles and techniques. For the last few years she has been studying the ancient art of Chinese brush painting with a recognized master Chinese artist. Several of the paintings in the exhibit display the fluid use of the brush. Favorite subjects for this style of painting includes natural scenes such as landscapes, especially craggy mountains with gnarled trees and waterfalls, flowers, birds, and fish. An example is "Blue Mountain," with the dominant blue color flowing lines to delineate the steep chasms and peaks of the mountain as it thrusts upward to

Linden Road repairs delayed due to water line conflict

Repairs to Linden Road have been delayed, but should be done later this week, a city official said Tuesday.

"Today they turned off the water (supply) for awhile, but it's back on. The culvert is in. Tomorrow they'll put in base rock for the new road, and Friday -- or possibly as early as Thursday afternoon -- the road will re-open," said Larry von Kaenel, assistant to the West Sacramento city manager.

The road bed slipped away to form a 14 foot deep sinkhole about 10 days ago, when irrigation water finished eating away an underground pipe and soil eroded. Repairs were complicated when city workers discovered that if they install the right diameter replacement pipe, it will conflict with existing drinking water pipes.

"Whoever repaired it in the past put in a smaller pipe to avoid the conflict," said von Kaenel. The below-code repair job probably pre-dated the city, he added.

A delay in finishing the job resulted when parts had to be back ordered from Seattle.

The sinkhole is located east of Jefferson Blvd., and just west of Our Lady of Grace school. Residents of the Linden East neighborhood -- including the city manager, Joe Goeden -- must use South River Road as a detour to and from their homes.

String of daylight burglaries in Southport

A resident of the rural portion of Southport (West Sacramento's southern half) reports that her neighborhood has been victimized by a string of daylight burglaries, with miscellaneous goods being stolen.

Sgt. Ray Hensley confirmed that "over the past couple of months, at least half a dozen" of the daylight burglaries have taken place in the general area of French and Davis roads and Jefferson Blvd.

The burglaries have taken place at homes where the residents were "obviously" not home, he added.

Residents are advised to watch for suspicious people.

Council candidate calls for ethics in '96 campaign

City council candidate Christopher Cabaldon has issued a press release calling for his fellow candidates to join him in maintaining "strict campaign finance ethics" on the road to the November election.

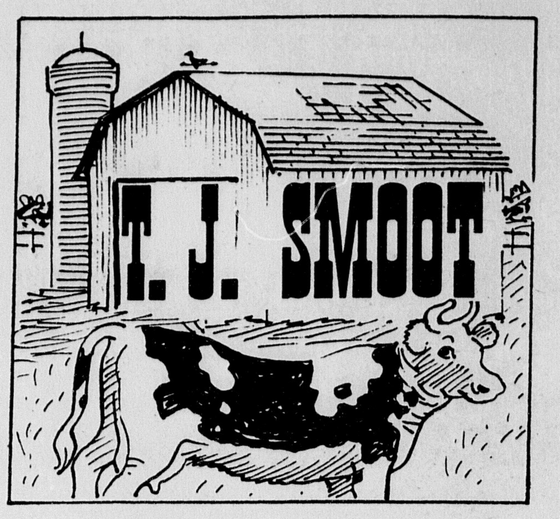
"Cabaldon voluntarily committed not to accept any large contributions or any contributions from businesses with a conflict-of-interest or from policitical action committees," the press release stated.

He also called on the others to join him in refusing any campaign donations above $100.

The city has adopted an ordinance forbidding donations of more than $250 from a single party to a campaign.

Between us men: a little snip can make for a better world

"T.J. Smoot" is the pen name of a neighbor of yours. His thoughts appear here every other week.



Some say money makes the world go 'round. Some say that less crime, more brotherly love will make everyone happy. But I painfully beg to differ on both of these points. Do you want to make people happy? Do you want to create a bond with others that will last longer than a Hallmark greeting card? I believe I've found the secret to creating just a little bit of joy for those around you. How, you might ask? Get a vasectomy.

Those "thirty-something" years are quickly fleeting, and with our two kiddos, we decided that we were all for zero population growth. You know, we don't want to tax our earth's food, fuel and air resources any more than we had done ourselves. Or maybe it was that desperate flash I've only seen once in Mrs. Smoot's eyes. Right after her pregnancy test came out negative, she command me, "GO GET A VASECTOMY!" All I could say was "Uuu-Kay." (Sheepish smile)

So it was decided, and I began my journey into the world of Vas by calling my doctor's office. I spoke in hushed tones since I was at work. "Uh, hi. I'd like to get a referral to a urologist for a...um...a...vas...vasectomy." The youthful (why are they always youthful?) female on the other end suppressed a giggle. "Uuu-Kay. Let's see. That would be Dr. X. Tee Hee." From there on it seemed like everyone I spoke with really, really enjoyed the fact that I was getting snipped. "Why is it that everyone is so happy when I'm scheduling a vasectomy?" I wondered. I've never had this experience when they stuck a tube down my throat to look around, or when they cut a skin tag off of my tongue. But I was to discover that my few experiences were just the beginning.

A few days later while in the exam room for my pre-surgery consultation, I brought this happy subject up with Dr. X. He really didn't say too much but was in fine spirits, nevertheless. Slowly, I began to suspect a brotherhood of vasectomy aficionados who were sworn to secrecy about its very existence.

Not being overly modest about the impending surgery, I began to share this coming event with others. It brought a smile to everyone's face. It seemed like most everyone I spoke with was a Vas-veteran. My boss, my friend Dan, and even a co-volunteer at the church nursery all were part of the fraternity. All encouraged me to have the procedure, and we had just ducky conversations about my decision.

So when the day came to join my brave brothers in Vas, I really wasn't too disturbed...until I re-read the pamphlet. "...you will be STERILE...." Gulp! Sterile! Me? I hushed my panic and still managed to make it to Dr X's office for the appointment. I was greeted by the only poker-faced person in this whole scenario...a young (of course) nurse. In the exam room, she asked, "Did you shave?" "Uh...only my chin." (Nervous smile) "Uuu-Kay." She replied with a perfect deadpan affectation. "I'll have to wash and shave you in preparation for the procedure." Mild panic set in. She was still professional and deadpan. "Hey, how 'bout those 'Niners?" I offered. No significant response. "Hey," I looked down to her, "How come everyone I've spoken to in getting this vasectomy is all happy about it?" "There's nothing to laugh about," she stated flatly. "It's a very effective procedure, especially if you...." Then she broke character and smiled. In a few minutes, she was just as perky about this as all the others. At least this was consistent. Soon Dr. X came in, and in a few short minutes, I was done. When I left and came back briefly to get my parking ticket validated, I overhead Dr. X (in a near jig) blurt out to his staff, "I just did a vasectomy." More joy. Later that day, I walked like The Lone Ranger would after a day's ride on Trigger, but at least it was all over, or so I thought.

Then the REAL stories of the Vas-vets began to come out: The ice-packs, the six-month recovery time, the jockstrap versus the ineffective briefs, and the three (not two) incisions done by a rookie resident. In discussing this procedure with a Vas-vet, he subsequently shared my experience with his two young daughters, using it as a sex-education teaching lesson. Hey, it's all for the cause, I suppose.

I've finally recovered from this joyful procedure, and in all cases good and jubilation abounded from it all. So that's why I say if you want to change the world for the better, to make our tiny planet a little more pleasant...get a vasectomy. You'll be glad you did. Er...at least others will be glad you did.

The Sports Insider

The San Francisco Giants are falling apart like a cheap suit from K-Mart!

The Giants are trailing the Western division pack by 12 games. They made a couple of trades to help improve the team, but they were more geared at preparing for next year. The Giants traded three starting players and placed Thompson, Dunston, Williams and Javier on the disabled list. The only healthy player left from the season starting lineup is Bonds!

The call went out to the minor leagues, and it's "wait until next year" for S.F.!

The A's are still fighting for a playoff spot in the Western Division. The A's trail Texas by six games, but have a good chance of grabbing the last playoff spot. The A's have lost eight of 11 games, but when you lead the major leagues with 183 home runs, you still have a slugger's chance. The A's will open their left field bleachers to the public on Friday, where seats will be $2.

The 49ers lost to Denver last Saturday 20-17 but injuries to running backs is their main concern. Look for the Niners to shop the waiver wires or make a trade to bring in a running back. The 49ers will play San Diego at 3 Com Park on Saturday at 5 p.m. (Ch. 40).

The Raiders kicked the Arizona Cardinals around last Friday with a 26-3 win. The Raiders host Seattle in Oakland on Thursday night at 5 p.m. (Ch. 3).

See ya next week!!

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Tiny signs of progress

A resident of "old West Sacramento," a region of town which includes the neighborhood surrounding Park Blvd., was chatting about girls' softball teams.

"It didn't used to be hard" to organize parents into running such a league, she said. Another parent added that it also didn't used to be hard organizing West Sacramentans into organizations such as the PTA (Parent-Teachers Association), either. But it has been in recent years.

Others have noticed similar things. Sometime during the last decade or two, people here have become less willing to get involved -- to take responsibility for -- their community. At the same time, there is a perception that the quality of life went downhill.

If that's true, then at least now we're seeing some hopeful signs. The little things are starting to look up, and if the trend continues, the region may be on its way to the revival West Sacramento says it wants.

It won't be a mythical "Lighthouse Marina" which saves West Sacramento and makes it a "premier city." It won't be a "golden egg" such as the MacMillan Bloedel paper plant, or the city's purchase of the old Vacation Inn for $4.5 million, or any other of the big ticket items the public has paid for in one way or another.

Even the Money Store offices, now under construction near where West Capitol Ave. approaches the Sacramento River, isn't a magic bullet. It will help slowly spur some revitalization nearby, and have some other nice indirect effects. But when a city official recently pronounced that the importance of the Money Store to West Sacramento "cannot be overstated," he -- well -- overstated it.

No, the real solutions will come from neighbors and their neighborhoods, and from a determined attitude among West Sacramentans and their city to win the little battles, one by one.

To this end, there are some good signs.

Some of the credit belongs to the police department. Partly because of their encouragement, neighborhood watch groups are up and growing. People are realizing that they are their own front line defense against the crime they fear.

Events like yesterday's National Night Out Against Crime help to dramatize this, and to encourage neighbors to get to know each other and to start to look out for their fellow residents.

The police are also focusing on a campaign of what might be called "little things," but with the overall intent of making the lowlifes of this community stand out against an improving backdrop, and of making these criminals feel uncomfortable doing what they do here.

Whether this campaign is by cracking down on hookers and their customers (and therefore putting the squeeze on this drug-related profession), trying to control gang graffiti, or working on a law to prevent panhandlers from harassing honest citizens, the results will be slow, sure and positive.

West Sacramento's often apathetic populace also has some pockets of life.

Residents of areas such as Broderick (in the northeast) and the Maple/Holly street neighborhood have organized themselves to work with the city and its agencies to clean things up.

Add this to good omens such as the one we heard last week, when it became official that the class sizes in local elementary schools are expected to start dropping and allowing more of the teachers' attention to be spent on each student, and there's reason to crack a slow smile.

There are signs that this city is near the beginning of a gradual revival.

Sound Off!

'Sound Off!' is your weekly call-in opinion line. Please see the box below for details on how to participate. This week's comments:

I want to know how come the newspaper did not have anything about the big high speed chase. The West Sacramento Police chased a van twice over here at the block off of West Capitol, Duluth, Houston and Harbor. I heard it killed a lady, and I think something that serious should be reported.

I think it's your duty to report it.

Editor's note: We held your comment for a week until we could check and respond. Readers are encouraged to call our regular phone line instead of 'Sound Off' with concerns about news coverage, so we can get them a better and more timely response.

The chase you apparently refer to occurred a couple of weeks ago when officers pursued an "erratic driver" in a loop a couple of times on the streets you mention. Lt. Russ Thomas of the W.S.P.D. reports that it was not a high speed chase, though, with speeds staying under about 45 m.p.h. The suspect vehicle, which was towing a trailer, narrowly missed striking a patrol car, but scratched at least one other vehicle before crashing into a car with three people in it.

No one was killed in this accident. One woman in the severly damaged car was hospitalized and released. Two others were treated at the scene.

The News-Ledger endeavors to report all traffic fatalities in West Sacramento, and reports other noteworthy traffic incidents when possible.

I'm calling because I see now you're advertising winning tickets for the Renaissance Faire, Marine World and theater for new subscribers. Well, whatever happened to the free pay-per-view from Sonic Cable for those of us who subscribed six months ago. I never received my free pay per view yet from Sonic Cable.

Editor's note: Again, this question is best directed to our regular phone number. If you (or any other subscribers who signed up during that promotion) didn't receive your coupon for a free cable movie, we'd be happy to get it to you. But we do need a name and address -- which you didn't provide -- to send it to.

Please call 371-8030 and leave that information, and we'll get the coupon right out to you.

Running for school board

I am announcing that I am a candidate for a seat on the Governing Board of the Washington Unified School District. I have been a member of this community for more than forty years and was employed by the school district as a program administrator for thirty of those years. A position requiring expertise in budgeting, purchasing, and personnel. I believe the Board of Education needs to focus on Child Education issues and leave politics to the politicians. I will work cooperatively with staff, parents and community leaders to prepare our children today to compete in the world tomorrow.

How concerned are you about the impact of government on our personal lives and freedom? The Federal Government seems so far away that many of us have ignored who's doing what Capitol Hill and how that affects us. While most of us have been very busy providing for our families and volunteering our time for worthwhile services, we haven't noticed how intrusive government has become. Here

Phone company 'disappointed' at decision not to allow area code overlays to solve problem

From Pacific Bell

Pacific Bell has announced that it is disappointed with the California Public Utilities Commission's decision on August 2 to not approve the use of area code overlays in California. Pacific Bell continues to support the area code overlays as a viable alternative to the traditional splitting of area codes geographically.

"Unfortunately, we regret the outcome of the Commission action on area code overlays. It prevents us from applying the overlay solution anywhere until we can secure approval of the CPUC," said John A. Gueldner, Pacific Bell's Vice President, Regulatory.

With an overlay, customers would not be forced to change their phone number, and businesses would not be burdened with the high expense of changing business cards, stationery, signs and advertising.

In its order, the Commission said area code splits are required until "number portability" is introduced (in 1998 or 1999 in most areas of California). Then, Pacific Bell must petition the CPUC for permission to use an overlay. Number portability would allow customers to keep the same phone number regardless of the phone company that provides their local service.

Right now the number of available phone numbers in such areas as 310, 619, 510 and 714 is critically low, so low in fact that we are concerned we may run out of numbers before a geographical split can be implemented, Gueldner added.

Telephone companies can introduce an overlay in far less time than a geographical split. However, we understand that the Commission's order precludes using overlays without further approval by the CPUC.

The Commission's decision still leaves open the door to considerable local dispute on what to do when an area code runs out of numbers. In instances of splits, it is likely to result in numerous complaints because affected cities will not like the way a geographical line is drawn or may insist upon the other side of a split getting the new area code, Gueldner said.

are some results:

1) People who work for a living pay 30-50 percent of their incomes in various forms of taxes and fees. While government takes our earned money, we have almost no control over how it is spent.

2) God has been rejected from our schools.

3) Property rights, parental rights, right to life, childrens rights to innocence, rights to bear arms, and many states rights have been eliminated, reduced or threatened.

4) The very basis of our society, the institution of marriage, is being attacked by the discouragement of commitment between a man and a woman.

5) Alternative sexual lifestyles are being promoted.

6) Government hand-out programs have become a way of life to generations of Americans instead of a helping hand to individuals who are in temporary need.

7) Individual responsibility and achievement is being punished while criminal acts are being excused and even condoned.

8) Our educational system is failing to prepare our children for success after graduation. Many graduates cannot read, write, or work out math word problems.

9) Our judicial system leans towards treating criminals as victims.

10) What we used to call pornography, we now call art forms and protect it citing freedom of expression and speech and even worse our government provides funding for it.

These are more than just trends in American lifestyle. This is the current course chartered for us by big government. For over 18 years, our current congressman has diligently practiced the kind of politics that has delivered a government promoting this kind of America. He's proud of it. He's built himself a power base and the financial means that enables him to persuade you to send him back again to do more of the same, even though his methods of addressing Americas problems have failed miserably.

Tim Lefever offers a distinctive alternative to the "big government" type of representation we've endured for the last 18 plus years. He is committed to affecting a change in the destructive course we are now on. Tim is a businessman in our district who has a young family. He relates to our desire to live our lives, earn our incomes, raise our families, practice our faith without the burden of an intrusive government. He agrees that public policy should support people in their roles as citizens, spouses, parents, and neighbors not substitute personal responsibility with government control.

Most of us feel that it is useless to voice our concerns to a far away government. And...that's true...UNLESS...we send someone to the very seat of power who shares those concerns with us. The election in November is crucial. Practice your right to vote and send Tim Lefever to congress.

Gravel initiative

As this weeks paper goes to press, the Yolo County Board of Supervisors is set to approve "the best gravel mining plan in the State. It may be as the Supervisors stated at the July 31 meeting; however, that doesn't make it good enough for Yolo County. Why? The answer is found, in part, in the form of the off-channel mining plan that the Board laid out a year ago -- 30-year entitlements to do deep pit gravel mining along 14 miles of Cache Creek -- rather than regulations which did not vest rights. The rationale being that the County was obligated to give the gravel miners such rights to mine.

Part of it is in the nature of the destruction of the natural Creek food plain and its aquifer, wildlife and farming, and the quality of life for those living in the area adjoining the mining and along the roads traveled by the gravel trucks.

It is ironic that a Sacramento newspaper last week praised Yolo County for developing an economic development plan based on the continued importance of its agriculture base (industry being Ag related industries) and tourism aspects of both Yolo's farms and whitewater rafting on Cache Creek etc. This plan, 180 degrees from the concept of exploitation of the gravel beds, was scheduled for the morning of August 6 (yesterday). The rationale of those who are working for both intensive deep pit gravel mining and attracting tourism with Cache Creek being that the gravel miners are promising to pay fees which restore damage done, return farm land to farm land, create lakes in the deepest pits, assist wildlife and donate land for recreation.

Will Cache Creek be saved? Yes it will if the voters in Yolo County understand that the initiative which has qualified for the ballot in November with @ 7,000 signatures; it calls for shallow off-channel gravel mining. The County Plan, with its authorization of very deep pits, put together to fight the initiative, will also be on the ballot, competing for your vote.

Will Cache Creek be lost to us so that the developers may have the building materials they need (and the miners need for profits)?

Hetch Hetchy, a second Yosemite, was sacrificed in the earlier part of this century so that San Francisco could have water to grow. I hope that in 1996, the voters understand that natural resources, especially those relating to water, once changed, are gone forever. It is common sense that Humpty Dumpty could not be put back together again.

Senior Housing Off To A New Start

The City's vision for a premier city includes an adequate supply of housing for all residents. The future development of Margaret McDowell Manor will bring us one step closer to that goal. The ideal use for the site has been envisioned as senior housing since the purchase of what was once known as The Vacation Inn by the City in 1991.

Centrally located on Merkley Avenue between Jefferson Blvd. and 15th Street, senior residents of Margaret McDowell Manor will be within easy walking distance of the grocery store, post office and banks, as well as other retail and service outlets.

With recent settlement of a protracted lawsuit, the City can now proceed with development. Margaret McDowell Manor will reduce the shortage of housing units for seniors in our community by providing 80 to 87 one-bedroom units complete with kitchens. The two- to three-story building will be equipped with elevators and a recreation room set aside for residents only.

The City has partnered with Christian Church Homes, an experienced developer of senior housing, to complete the complex. In an effort to reduce the need for City funds, the developer plans to submit an application to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for senior housing funds. Eligible seniors will be 62 years and over and earning less than $16,500 a year (or $18,500 for senior couples).

In addition to standards set by HUD, the City Council insists on specific measures to ensure high quality development. Margaret McDowell Manor is no exception and will be held to the same high standards including:

- Approved marketing & management plan including strict maintenance standards; and
- Selection and screening of qualified tenants.

Notification of grant results are expected in October. Demolition of the existing building is also scheduled for October with the first possible date of construction being August 1997.

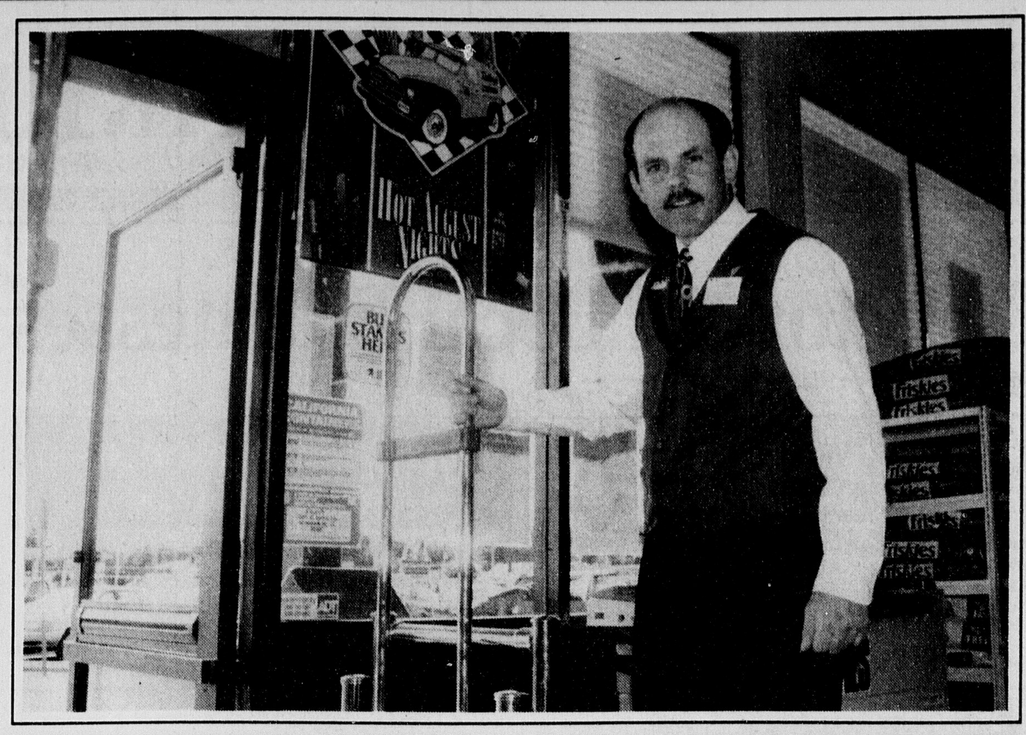
Safe groceries —



RON KONKEL, manager of the Raley's supermarket in West Sacramento, stands alongside a device most people are not used to seeing in grocery stores.

The device is an electronic sensor designed to detect (and sound an alarm for) merchandise which is not paid for. Its purpose is to detect and deter shoplifting.

"We all pay for shoplifting," said Chuck O'Bear, loss prevention manager for the Raley's/Bel Air supermarket chain in West Sacramento. "In a general sense, costs go up because of shoplifting. Somebody has to pay for those goods."

The West Sacramento Raley's joins nine stores in the 70-store Raley's/Bel Air chain to use the sensors.

reach the sky. Another composition, "Crane and Pine," combines a rugged pine tree, twisted by nature but still functioning as a source of protection for the crane.

"Two Cranes" uses a traditional, graceful composition with Calligraphic lines accenting the rhythms of the birds in nature. "Bird and Magnolia" is an enigmatic scene with the brilliantly- colored bird camouflaged and surrounded by the bright Magnolia tree blossoms. The trees and flowers painted by Stead show the great variety of texture, shapes and forms to be found in nature.

A small, jewel-like collage uses the Chinese brush technique with the combination of the birds in gold-printed collage with line to keep the composition unified on the yellow ocher background. A different approach to a collage is the handmade paper sculpture called "Rain Cloud" with the floating effect of the cloud represented by the off white of the paper.

One of the most popular paintings of the viewers attending the reception held for the artist on August 4 is the large watercolor painted in a friend's iris garden. The strong colors of the yellow iris are set-off by the use of contrasting and complimentary colors. The texture in the background provides a great foil for the softness of the flower petals and is very visually pleasing.

The exhibit, sponsored by the East Yolo Friends of the Library, will remain on view until the end of August during regular library hours.
